2. Definitions and Explanations

In this declaration, all de minimis aid is to be declared that the company or company group has received as a "single undertaking" within a period of three years.

For the purposes of the regulation, companies are to be regarded as a single undertaking if they are in one of the following relationships with each other:

- One company holds the majority of the voting rights of the shareholders or partners in another company,
- One company has the right to appoint or remove a majority of the administrative, management or supervisory body of another company,
- One company has the right to exercise a dominant influence over another company pursuant to a contract or a provision in the articles of association,
- One company, which is a shareholder or partner in another company, controls alone, by virtue of an agreement with other shareholders or partners of that company, a majority of the shareholders' or partners' voting rights.

Companies that are in any of the above relationships with one or more other companies shall also be considered as a single undertaking.

In the event of mergers or acquisitions, all de minimis aid granted to the participating companies during the previous three-year period must be taken into account. In the context of company spin-offs, the de minimis aid is to be attributed to the company retaining the business activity, for which the aid was granted. If this is not possible, the allocation shall be made on the basis of the book value of the equity at the time of the actual spin-off.
